The wrapper worn by Mrs. Bonine when she went to Ayres' room was produced and identified. Lieutenant Moore said that there were no rents under the arms of the sleeves when he saw the garment. As introduced in court the wrapper was torn under each arm.

Under cross-examination the witnessaid that he had not looked for rents un der the arms in the sleeves of the wrapper, and that they might have been there when he first examined the garment. The wrapper was passed around among the jurymen and examined carefully. Attorney Fulton then brought the garment to Mrs. Bonine, who, after a careful inspec tion, showed him just how and where the

Dr. E. M. Schaeffer, the expert who made an analysis of the blood-spots found in the room occupied by Ayres and cn the articles of furniture, said that he had been employed in making microscopical examinations in criminal cases since

The witness was handed the wrapper worn by Mrs Bonine and stated that he had carefully examined it. He said that he could not find on the entire garment a single spot the size of a pinhead which showed the presence of blood. He made a second examination, a more crucial one, and found not a single blood spot or stain. The witness said he used the most powerful microscope obtainable.

Dr. Schaeffer also said that he had worked over the garment for twenty days, and that when he received it there was a tear under the left arm. The tear under the right arm was not there when he examined the garment.

The witness examined the room occupled by Ayres and cut out a patch from the carpet, taking it away with him. The stains on the carpet indicated a great outpouring of blood.

When asked whether the blood stains could have been washed from the garnot, as the microscope would discove:

WORK OUTLINED FOR CONGRESS.

Coming Session Expected to be a Record Breaker.

BIG APPROPRIATIONS ARE PREDICTED

Estimated That Nearly Two Billion Dollars Will Be Expended. Plans in Senate and House. Probable Legislation.

For at least two reasons the Fiftyseventh Congress, the first session of which begins at noon on Monday next, will be notable in history. The approwill be greatly in excess of those of any preceding Cengress. Ten years ago a billion-dollar Congress furnished the text for the economists and Democrats. The record for the coming Congress will be more nearly two billion dollars, so vast has been the growth of the country and its needs.

If for no other reason than for the liberal expenditures to be made for public markable. But it will have other claims as a history-maker if, as now seems probable, provision is made for starting the construction of the interoceanic canal. The inauguration of this great work will in itself be epoch-making and will cause the Fifty-seventh Congress to be long re-

What Congress Will Probably Do. Outside of the regular work which comes up in every Congress, such as the supply bills for the various departments of the Government, pension legislation, a few bills to pay claims, etc., what the Congress will probably do is as follows:

Provide for the improvement of rivers and harbors by appropriating between $70,000,000 and $80,000,000 for the work. Establish a new department of the Government, to be called the Department of Commerce, and to include the Conselar Service, the Bureau of Statistics, trade relations with other countries, mines, and mining transportation, and

There is a suggestion that a bill will be introduced to pay Admiral Schley a bounty for the destruction of the Spanish fleet at Santiago-a feat for which Admiral supson has already received more than 28 600 while Schley's share is figured at only $500. This in itself will be a fruitful theme for discussion.
